Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 10 sedentary, middle-aged men. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The sessions included aerobic exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The results showed that the participants experienced significant improvements in cardiovascular fitness, muscle strength, and flexibility after the 12-week program. The study suggests that a structured exercise program can effectively improve physical fitness in sedentary middle-aged men.

the 1990s, the number of people in the United States who are obese has increased by 50 percent. In 1990, 15 percent of the population was obese, and by 2000, that number had risen to 22 percent. In 2008, the number of obese people in the United States was estimated to be 33 percent of the population. The increase in obesity is a major public health concern because it is a leading cause of heart disease, diabetes, and other chronic diseases. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) estimates that obesity costs the United States $147 billion each year in medical costs and lost productivity. The CDC also estimates that obesity is responsible for 280,000 deaths each year in the United States. The increase in obesity is a result of many factors, including changes in diet and lifestyle. In the 1990s, the average American consumed more calories than in previous decades, and many people began to lead more sedentary lifestyles. The increase in obesity is also a result of changes in the environment. Many people live in areas where there are no safe places to walk or exercise, and many people work long hours, leaving them little time for exercise.
